A sample of 20 nurses who participated in an adult day care center's daily evaluation program was surveyed. Each nurse completed a self-administered questionnaire to evaluate the content and design of the instrument that was used to assess the program. The test of reliability was satisfactory and, according to the nurses, very easy to use, resulting in the identification of problems with the information derived from the assessment.The present invention relates to a method of producing high quality light-sensitive microcapsules and, more particularly, to a method of producing high quality light-sensitive microcapsules which are suitable for the photosensitive lithographic printing plates and the electro-photographic printing plates. Heretofore, the so-called "light-sensitive microcapsules" have been proposed and put to practical use for production of electro-photographic printing plates. According to these light-sensitive microcapsules, particles composed of a light-sensitive composition such as silver halide, chal
